Document concerning the beneficial owners of a company

In accordance with anti-money laundering and counter terrorist financing provisions, electronic money institutions have to fulfill identification requirements. One of these requirements is to identify the beneficial owners of their clients.

Any private individual who ultimately owns or controls all or part of the company's share capital or any private individual for whom a transaction is executed or an activity carried out will be considered a "beneficial owner".

For companies, the notion of "beneficial owner" includes the following cases:

- Control through direct ownership of at least 25% of the capital: A shareholding or ownership interest of at least 25% by a private individual is an indication of direct ownership.
- Control through indirect ownership of at least 25% of the capital: A shareholding or share capital participation of at least 25% by one or more holding companies controlled by one or more private individuals is an indication of indirect ownership.
- Control via other means, other than a company listed on a regulated market which is subject to disclosure requirements compatible with European Union law or equivalent international standards which ensure the adequate transparency of ownership information.
- In the absence of direct or indirect ownership and after having exhausted all possible means and provided that there are no grounds for suspicion, any private individual who holds the position of senior managing officer will be considered a beneficial owner

The declaration of beneficial owners is a supplement to the company's articles of association, which can either be silent regarding the shareholding or only mention the holding companies. The declaration therefore provides accurate and up-to-date information.
